The IFRS update solution for smaller firms

As a small to medium accounting practitioner, you are proud to be an accounting professional. You find your reward in being a specialist in the eyes of your clients, and look forward to serving the users of your financial statements to the best of your abilities.

Recently, this has become more challenging for you and your colleagues due to the ever increasing pressures of staying up to date with the constant changes to the accounting standards. Accounting standard setters are being forced to address the shifting demands of users of financial statements, and you have no choice but to invest time and resources in keeping up with these changes.

You have attended the CPD update seminars, sat through the webinars and read the technical articles but still find yourself lacking the understanding of the practical applications. The question running through your mind is: “how do I journalise this?”. Tabaldi is constantly working to help you do this efficiently and practically.

Tabaldi is humbled by the efforts that accounting practitioners go through to stay up to date on accounting, tax, audit and legislative matters. It is a mammoth task, and can feel overwhelming.

With a combined background of professional training, academic education and practical consultation we would like to introduce you and your firm to our bi – annual group based IFRS workshops. These workshops are designed to increase your return on investment in the area of financial accounting development and training in a cost efficient manner.

IFRS group workshops

The workshop is group based, with your firm investment being to purchase a table for your group of 4 to 6 individuals. Discounts apply for multiple table purchases should you wish to send through more than one group from your firm.

Our training is interactive and group based with a focus on turning complex theory into practical journals. We utilise smart sympodiums with the latest technologies available to educators, which enables our experienced presenters to address questions from groups and individuals as they are raised.

There will be multiple exercises requiring either individual application or small group discussion, with feedback to be given to the presenter as requested (i.e., no sitting and falling asleep, attendees will be required to participate).

The training will consist of a bi annual full or half day of IFRS updates and topical issues. Technical in nature, but practical in application. We attempt to journalise the latest developments in financial accounting for use in practice.

Method of delivery

Our group approach requires each group attending to consist of 4 to 6 delegates, with a team leader (preferably a partner or senior manager).

The benefits to this approach are as follows:

- Delegates are required to participate and apply themselves mentally, thus increasing knowledge transfer;
- Partners and managers will interact with staff on a first hand basis;
- A competitive element is incorporated in a controlled manner, thereby increasing energy and creating an environment conducive to practical learning;
- Specific problematic areas can be addressed and dealt with in a consistent manner to the entire firm in an efficient manner;
