What you do is vital for markets to function

As an audit and accounting practice you are expected to be a technical accounting expert. IFRS and IFRS for SME's is the lifeblood of your business. Without an in depth knowledge of the latest changes and core principles you are exposing your firm to the risk of being incompetent.

The key to a sustainable and successful practice is to be effective in your continuing professional development (CPD) investment. The ever changing world of IFRS and IFRS for SME's is exciting, but is portrayed by many "IFRS experts" as being so complex that you will never truly grasp it. Tabaldi has a unique approach that encourages you to take control of your destiny, and be exceptional in your IFRS and technical accounting abilities.

The same situation exists for professional financial managers and corporate accountants outside of public practice. Your management, investors and the public at large all rely on you to present accurate financial information that is of a high quality. High quality financial reporting is vital to communicating firm performance, without it markets fail and people's lives are affected.

For both public accountants and financial reporting accountants, our message to you is to stop relying on others to ensure that your life's work is of sufficient quality – take responsibility for your own knowledge and be great at what you do. Our goal at Tabaldi is to assist and guide you along this road to excellence.

Tailored in house IFRS training

To assist, Tabaldi has developed three tailored in house training mechanisms for empowering your firm or finance and accounting team:

1) The bi-annual accounting update

- A bi annual full or half day of IFRS updates and topical issues. Technical in nature, but practical in application. We attempt to journalise the latest developments in financial accounting for use in practice.

2) Topic specific training, developed to your needs

- Full or half day topic specific knowledge transfer. The courses can be tailored to accommodate your firm methodologies to develop a consistent firm wide approach to dealing with a topic.

3) IFRS and IFRS for SME's – practical principles for trainees

- A 5 day principles course (IFRS and IFRS for SME) to prepare your trainees to deal with the application of IFRS and IFRS for SME's.

Method of delivery

The method of delivery we use demands interaction and entices participants to learn. There is little benefit to a death by powerpoint presentation listing the changes to accounting standards. Our training is interactive and group based with a focus on turning complex theory into practical journals. We utilise smart symposiums with the latest technologies available to educators, which enables our experienced presenters to address questions from groups and individuals as they are raised.

There will be multiple exercises requiring either individual application or small group discussion, with feedback to be given to the presenter as requested (i.e., no sitting and falling asleep, attendees will be required to participate).

Our group approach requires each group attending to consist of 4 to 6 delegates, with a team leader (preferably a partner or senior manager).

Tailored in house IFRS training

The benefits to this approach are as follows:

- Delegates are required to participate and apply themselves mentally, thus increasing knowledge transfer;
- Partners and managers will interact with staff on a first hand basis;
- A competitive element is incorporated in a controlled manner, thereby increasing energy and creating an environment conducive to practical learning;
- Specific problematic areas can be addressed and dealt with in a consistent manner to the entire firm in an efficient manner;

Direction from partners or senior managers on specific topic related issues that the firm would like to correct and deal with on a regular basis will be welcomed prior to each session. If necessary we will, in consultation with a representative from your firm provide clarity to all attendees on the methodology that is in line with your firm's approach.
